Market Update

Category	Up/Down/Flat	News Flash
Beef		Rounds and striploin markets down slightly. Ribeye market is steady. Tenderloins are on the rise. Overall Markets are down.
Poultry		Due to further poultry cutbacks the chicken cutout value should remain firm. In fact, record high wing prices are likely to occur soon. The same may hold true for chicken leg quarter prices as well. Chicken breast prices remain firm
Milk		On the east coast, milk production is on the rise as well, with steady fluid demand there is more milk available for manufacturing into storable products. In Florida conditions are reported to be deteriorating for farms as cold and dry weather is limiting pasture growth. Milk production levels in the region have flattened out, but steady fluid demand has kept the market mostly in balance.
Cheese		Cheese markets are weak. Prices fell during most trading sessions at the CME last week on somewhat light volume. Block and barrel prices are now just above the 1.50 mark – a level that has not been seen since January 20th, 2011. With the drop in US prices, domestic buying may start to pick up as buyers start to look for a short term bottom.
Butter		Butter markets are also weak. CME spot prices moved down 3 of the 4 sessions on zero trades during the past holiday shortened week. Cream supplies have been readily available to churns so far this year, and as a result butter production is seasonally strong. This strong production in light of seasonally lower demand is allowing inventories to build.
Oil		As expected this week, we saw two-sided trading that was based on the constant change in the South American forecasts and flip-flopping between concern and optimism over the European Debt crisis. At the end of the week, we had two days of the market rallying and two days of the market selling off which ended with the market closing just 14 ticks higher from last Friday.
Flour		Wheat futures prices are choppy this week – up one day, down the next, and then up again. Basis levels are up this week with spring wheat leading the way.
Sugar		Raw-sugar futures for March delivery rose 0.3 percent to 24.96 cents a pound in New York. The price advanced for the sixth straight session, the longest rally since November 2010. The commodity has climbed 7.1 percent in January. Sugar futures remain bullish
