Scallops	↑	Prices remain extremely high and are expected to rise this winter .
Groundfish	↑	The winter months generally see a reduction in landings and the new study showing that Gulf of Maine Cod is not recovering could prompt the NMFS to cut Cod quota for 2012.
Tuna	↑	Supply of Tuna will increase from imports during the winter months, but worldwide supply is expected to be limited.

Market Update

Category	Up/Down/Flat	News Flash
Beef	↑	Beef end cut products such as briskets, chucks and rounds tend to move up in Jan but this year's gains could be less intense than last winter. History suggests these markets could peak next month.
Poultry	↑	Wing prices are currently trending 28% above their 5 year average for this time of the year. Chicken leg quarter and breast prices are elevated compared to prior winters as well. Higher chicken breast prices are likely in Feb.
Milk	→	Outlook for milk production next year remains strong leading to softer world prices for dairy .
Cheese	→	Where prices go from here remains to be seen: will we have lower prices in the first half and rebound in the 2nd half of 2012 It wouldn't be too surprising to see prices stay in the $1.50's from January-March next year but it also wouldn't be too surprising to see $2.00 cheese again by Summer given the lack of fresh cheese
Butter	→	Strong production and improving storage numbers are helping to drive butter lower .
Oil	→	US soybean futures end higher, fueled by traders maintaining risk premium in the market amid the uncertainties surrounding South American crop potential
Flour	→	Support came from outside markets. U.S. equity indexes, crude oil and gold are all up this week. Weakness in the U.S. dollar also played a role in wheat prices advancing. Wheat futures prices advanced this week. Basis remained steady.
Sugar	→	Sugar prices fell on Monday, driven down by an oil-led decline in commodity markets, technical influences and more abundant supplies.
